Q: Hey, um... What year is it?

A: It's the summer of 2070. And welcome!

Q: Hi... Who are you, guys?

A: Come and figure it out! We are everywhere. But we're also nowhere. We are one ego separated into five.

Q: Alright, then. What do you guys usually do?

A: We do many things. We are like fairies that hide and stalk other people. We eat leftover desserts. We join Zoom meetings. We hop on keyboards and motorcycles. Sometimes we all sleep on the same bed together.

Q: I can't believe I am in the future right now. Um, how does 2070 look?

A: Well, a lot of people are going through toxic nostalgia. All we're trying to do is go back to the past. People can basically repeat memories of their past over and over and never wake up. So almost everyone is asleep. We are actually inside someone else's brain, not the actual world. We are afraid to show what the world currently looks like. It's far from pretty. It's probably very far away from your ideals for the future.

Q: Well, how bad can it be?

A: Why do you think people are choosing not to wake up? This guy that we're taking care of especially misses sex equality and individual freedom, to be more specific. He refuses to face hardships, socialize with others, and age. It's hard to tell which one is actually him because we always see a bunch of different people in his memories. But we are assuming that he was a bisexual skater boy who grew up in California. Again, we don't know who he exactly is.

Q: Tell me about this guv.

A: He was born in 1982. All he does is repeat his teen memories as a young boy. He looks pretty happy in his memories, though. But now he is physically a dead soul, and he hasn't lived a real life since 2036. His business shut down, and yeah, we're not going to go over the details, but his life went down a hill. Believe it or not, the world has become more homophobic than ever, and the pollution is so bad that we can barely breathe and see clear skies outside. People are busy discriminating against each other. Love is almost gone. We are only able to see the most bright, hopeful parts of his life, which were his teen memories.

Q: Wow... This is hard to handle. I'm not sure if I want to be alive until 2070 because I thought the world couldn't get worse.

A: Oh, yes, it does

Q: Can I actually watch the memories of this guy with you?

A: Yeah, sure... His memories are so happy that it's sad... He also wrote a short letter on his blog, if you're interested. And let us tell you this: We all miss the past really badly. Nothing lasts. Enjoy the moment, but don't hold onto it. Unless you want to be stuck in the past, and even if your life gets miserable, don't forget that there were highs in your life before the lows.
